BL Systems battle

BL Systems, the computing and communications arm of the motor group, is to change its name to Istel in January in a bid to win more work from outside companies.

The Redditch-based company was set up in 1979 and has since won an increasing share of business from outside BL, expecting to hit a 30 per cent proportion by 1983. The move will also add to the attraction of the company when it comes up for privatisation from the state-owned group.

New role for BL computer experts

Business Mail Reporter

SIR MICHAEL EDWARDS, Chairman of BL, is making the car firm's computer system into a separate company providing computer services to customers outside the group as well as internally.

It is part of a strategic plan to ensure the company's various units and divisions have their own reference.

BL has recently announced the creation of BL Technology, which will be responsible for the group's advanced technology and engineering work.

The firm will be called BL Systems. It will continue to provide a comprehensive computer facility for the group itself, but will also offer its services.

In charge of the new company is Mr. John Leighfield, who is currently managing director.

Mr. Leighfield said yesterday: "We believe that we can exploit certain applications in which the work we have done is in advance of anything on the market."

The company will have a staff of 500 and initially will be based at Redditch where there are five inter-linked computers with connections through microwave to terminals throughout Britain.

The rationale behind the move is to make use of the current technical skills in an area of rapidly changing and expanding technology.

The company will be able to develop computer systems, data processing, communications, operational research, systems and computer training and technical support.

ISTEL-1-08-61 - NHS Payroll contract

AT&T provide the solution for health trusts' payroll system

LOCAL NHS trusts are turning to AT&T for the solution to their financial, personnel and payroll systems. West Midlands Hospital, Hounslow and Spelthorne Community and Mental Health Trust, and Ashford Hospital have spent £1.5 million on a seven year contract with AT&T. The deal should save them £127,000 a year, based on the cost of keeping it in-house. For the last six years the trusts have used their own hardware based on ageing equipment, but now all the machinery will be at AT&T's Redditch data centre. Staff at the trusts will be able to access their data from terminals at their offices. Chris Lennie, NAL, CO's district officer, said the unitary system will provide a better, more cost effective service without technical difficulties.

Computer staff in walk-outs

A HUNDRED computer staff at Northern Regional Health Authority are to strike for redundancy rights. Members of the National Association of Health Authority staff will stop work on Friday morning and Tuesday lunchtime for three-and-a-half hours to lobby health chiefs. The continuing service is due to be privatised on April 1 following NHS returns and an American company, AT&T ISTELE, is poised to take over the service. Chris Lennie, NAL, CO's district officer, said the unitary system will provide a better, more cost effective service without technical difficulties.

BUSINESS REPORTER WHEN it comes to computer software, Redditch giant AT&T ISTELE really takes the 'heat'. And, to prove it, the firm has all the craps to offer a £4.5 million contract with McVities Group. It will supply a hi-tech system to improve stock control at McVities' five main UK plants and also then all with the headquar- ters in London. McVities' finance director, John Bann, said the order fol- lowed five years of research and plan- ning. And he claimed the new system would be up-to-date and im- mune to the type of in- fluence in the UK food industry. "It will make a great contribution towards improved customer service and help us reduce stock and produc- tion costs," he said.

Programmer/Analysts
Gloucester      Negotiable salary

ISTEL is the UK's leading insurance information service, providing illustrations and information from 50 insurance companies to 27,000 registered users, such as major banking, accountants, brokers and insurance brokers.

As part of AT&T ISTEL, you can call upon the support and financial strength of one of Europe's leading Information Technology companies.

The continued demand for ISTEL's specialist expertise means that additional development resources are needed to service our clients.

Working as part of a small team, but with responsibility for your own work, you'll take customer specifications through the full development cycle to the program testing stage.

We are seeking Programmer/Analysts with at least 2 years experience, preferably BACS or a VAX/VMS environment. Knowledge of C would be a distinct advantage.

InView

However, programming experience gained in other environments would be considered an appropriate technical training will be provided. Any exposure to the Financial Services sector, particularly insurance, would be advantageous.

The working environment in Gloucester is excellent and as well as the competitive salary you will receive a package of benefits that includes private healthcare plans and pension scheme.

Current opportunities are also outstanding with an organisation concerned with both personal and technical development.

Send a full CV to Vicky Davies, Applications Development Manager, ISTEL, Royal House, Brunel Way, Gloucester, GL1 1EP.

7.6.2 Just-in-time production

An example was the just-in-time customer assembly production plan installed by ISTE Limited for Rover's Cowley plant. Rover aimed to select orders for build in a given period some five days ahead. From this could be developed a detailed 'Time Delivery Schedule' requirement to a supplier, to provide pallets of given components, in a given time, directly to the Rover, as part of an agreed load. ISTE also introduced a technique of labour allocation, TARDIS (Time and Resource Direct Input System). To use the system, each employee is issued with an identity badge bearing her photograph and signature. This badge is used to 'clock in' at the specific terminals. At each transaction, the intelligent clock immediately passes the employee's details to a central computer. Information is then available for management to monitor labour from one department to another. Any absences can have reasons for the absence recorded and notified to a separate computerized personnel record system. At the end of the week, the computer may use clockings against shift patterns and calculates hours to be paid. A press release claimed that ISTE's 'TARDIS' package 'has been successful in giving Rover the required monitoring of its Rover 800 series workforce'.
